

“Who owns history?”

In Charlottesville, Virginia, removal of a statue of Confederate general Robert E. Lee brought out protesters, some with links to white supremacist organizations. In Canada, members of the Ontario union of elementary school teachers advocated dropping John A. Macdonald's name from public buildings because of his aboriginal policy.

A public forum on historical monuments, the use of history and who gets to decide.

Hosted by the UFV History Department

September 26, 2017,
10:30am-12
Room A 219